"In the Tree of Dreams there is a song," Face in the Water said as we sat together in ceremony in the Sonoran Desert of Arizona. "Like any other living thing, it has a song to be sung. To lose your song is to lose your soul. The song in the tree is something to be listened for very, very carefully. It teaches you that life is never ending."

Smoke from the fire whirled around us in purple-gray plumes, creating mysterious shadows in the air.

"As the leaves begin to drop from the tree in autumn," she continued, "a harmonic is created. The harmonic is different with every leaf that falls and different again for every tree. The Tree of Dreams is you and me. We are all a tree of dreams. We are filled with yearning and joy and love. We are filled with the teachings that we have received and the experiences that have had. Our branches are the different times of our lives. The leaves are the experiences – the colors, textures, the aspects of the divine. As the leaves fall, the song can be heard, a new song that plays on the wind and is communicated to other trees, if they are listening.

"The whale people who live in the North speak about the great whale and how, when she sings a song, it is heard sometimes a thousand miles away. Another whale picks up that song, and the echo is heard another thousand miles away. This goes on until the song is created around the world by all whales singing in unison.

"The music that forms from dropping leaves is similar. The song that was very much your own blends to create a harmony with other songs as it touches the earth. It is at that moment that all leaves become one, surround the earth with crimson, orange, red and gold. .

"You have your song. You have learned about the ways of power early in your work with us. As long as you hear your song, you can never lose your direction or your vision. Remember the Owl will take you to your Tree of Dreams. You're not done here yet. The tree holds the other dreamers who are waiting to help you. Don't stray off the track – you that that. Follow your song line. It connects you to what is good and powerful for you.

"You live in both worlds. You live in spirit and you live on the earth. This is not an easy song to sing, but teaching the young ones to treasure their elderhood is the finest gift you can give, and you will do it well. As the leaves are falling, the new ones begin to grow. That is law. That is your story work. One of joys of elderhood is telling your story. This is our power before we die. We can pass on what we have learned. Our legacy is thousands of years old. Let it flow through your lips. Anyone can take up the drum and talk to the Great Spirit and join you in a chant. It has always been that way. Your work for the old ones here is just beginning. I am here for you."

My Dear Friend,

In the northern hemisphere we are deeply into autumn. For most of us, the trees have shown their autumnal splendor and are carpeting the earth with a multi-color carpet of leaves. This is a time of harvest, of gathering the fruits of our labors over the year, preparing for the cold winter ahead.

Many of us have just celebrated Thanksgiving, a day of gratitude for all the blessings in our lives. But gratitude and thanksgiving must not be relegated to just one day. It is a state of being which must be lived each day in order to truly bring power and healing into our lives.

After Face in the Water shared her story of our song with me, I told her,

"Thank you, Grandmother. There is so much I want to share, and I want to do it well. All of you have survived the hardships of reservation life so artfully. You have families, children and professions, to say nothing of your sacred teachings! You have transformed the difficult times into strength and power."

A very clear lesson I learned from every member of the Sisterhood of the Shields is the importance of gratitude. Gratitude energizes you. It is a state of being which is filled with strength, wisdom, endurance and all of the courage you need to move through hardship in an enlightened, intended way. Gratitude brings you into the present moment, which is where your strength and your power are always found.

Gratitude opens us to healing, and sets us on the path of awareness and growth. Through gratitude, you find the beauty and comforts of your present life, however meager it might seem on the surface, and with each whisper of "Thank You," your heart opens more to receive the abundance and love that is waiting for you in the Universe. It is gratitude and the act of giving thanks that draws the Light into your soul and helps you find the true wealth

you need in this lifetime.

Through my Mystery School, my Writing School, and each event or gathering I create each year, I am able to do what I told Face In the Water I so wanted to do – to share my dreams, my wisdom, and all the beautiful teachings of the Sisterhood of the Shields with each of you. I hope that 2018 will be the year that you accept the call and join me in whatever way is beckoning you.

My wish for each of you this autumn is that as you release your song, as your leaf floats to the ground to nourish Mother Earth and prepare for the new life and opportunities that await us all in the coming year, that you hear the harmony of everyone else's song, and feel the gratitude which comes with the awareness of how we are truly all One.

*In love and spirit,
Lynn*
